Dear ***,

Thank you for bringing the matter of the website erected by  and his cohort  to my attention. I am advised that as this has now also become a matter within German jurisdiction that I should seek advice from my lawyers in Berlin. As you know I lived there for two years and retained a very able lawyer there but he is currently on holiday until the 19th of this month. Obviously this has caused due diligence from our business associates and banking relationships. In all occasions the conclusion that the site itself is self evident has prevailed. Clearly as I have never committed a criminal offence in any jurisdiction ever this site is libelous and the words emanating from  are slanderous. Further there is unambiguous evidence of extremely prolonged stalking. I recently gave a speech at the convention centre in Hong Kong for  who are associated to our proprietary trading here. Before the speech I was asked to explain the website in my name in detail with their team.  Head of Institutional Business at  conducted the interview. .com.hk He did so and was satisfied that this site was "self evident" and my speech went ahead. I have also explained this site to all of my personal bankers and to our corporate banking relationships as well. On no occasion has any of these explanations failed to re-assure our business partners and banking relationships that this site is libel and slander.
